43815S3

ABSTRACT

A method for copy protection includes receiving data in a recording module representing content to be recorded on a recording medium, the data including an indication that the content is to be protected from unauthorized Responsive to the indication, the recording copying. signals a protection module to initiate protection protocol in synchronization with the recording The protection module generates information, so as to prevent the unauthorized copying of the content that is to be protected, and conveys the control information to the recording module, accordance with the protocol. The recording module combines the control information with the data representing the content in the recording module, for recording on the recording medium.